

David Burr, Associate

Overview

A native of the Gulf Coast, David was born in New Orleans and spent a formative decade in the area before relocating east to Gulf Breeze, Florida. He attended Davidson College, where he wrote for several student publications and led three cognitive research teams studying early childhood memory and attention.

Afterwards, David worked for two years under the General Counsel of a global energy corporation in Arlington, VA, before enrolling at the nearby Columbus School of Law in Washington, D.C. There, he co-founded and edited a legal newspaper, participated in moot court and mock trial and, outside of law school, taught English to recent immigrants to the Washington, D.C. area. Also licensed in New York, David's legal practice began in Manhattan, where he focused on corporate law and business immigration. In 2014, he reunited with the Gulf Coast and joined Galloway's Tampa office, where he practices commercial litigation, corporate transactions, insurance law and defense litigation.
